

How to play

Farm Bingo · 2–8 children · ages 4+ · great for preschool and parties

print at 100%

What you need

8 bingo cards, 24 caller cards and something to cover the squares – corn kernels, dried beans, buttons or small paper squares. Each child gets one bingo card.

How it works

One adult or child is the “farmer”. They shuffle the caller cards, draw one at a time and read out the name and animal sound – or only make the sound to make it trickier! Anyone who has that picture covers it with a corn kernel.

Winning

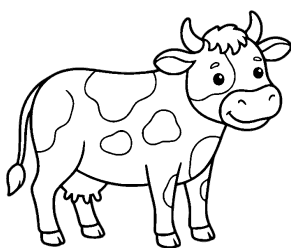

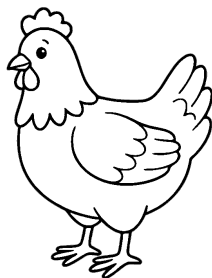

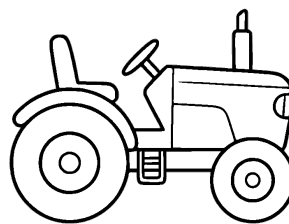

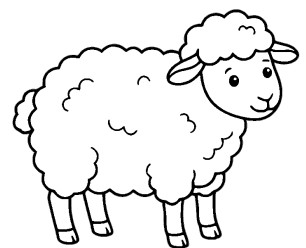

The first player with four covered squares in a row – across, down or diagonally – shouts “Bingo!” (or “Cock-a-doodle-doo!”). The farmer checks with the drawn caller cards.

Variations

For the youngest (ages 3+): just show the pictures and say the names together. – Full card: play until one child has covered all 16 squares. – Sound bingo: the farmer only makes the sound or describes the animal (“I have spines ...”) and the children guess.

Tip

Children can color in the coloring version before playing. Laminated cards last for many games – then you can also mark them with a wipe-off pen.
